What Sets IPO Apart from Other IP Associations?

As a worldwide trade association, our members include intellectual property owners in all industries and all fields of technology. This means that your clients—and prospective clients—are often members of IPO too. Where else can you collaborate directly with corporate in-house counsel on the most important issues in intellectual property rights? ●

Connect with In-House IP Counsel

IPO Members – including senior level officers and operations teams – collaborate and network year-round through a variety of IPO programs. Hundreds of companies and law firms and more than 12,000 individuals worldwide are involved in IPO.

Whether your IP practice has 100 attorneys or 1, IPO can help you achieve your firm's goals. Plus, IPO has a comprehensive membership structure. One membership covers your entire team.

Firms join IPO to build their practice and then remain involved to maintain those connections. Join IPO and find out what you are missing.

I encourage my entire IP team to take advantage of all that IPO has to offer. I know first-hand how participating in IPO supports the development of a diverse pipeline of leaders in IP."

SHELL OIL COMPANY

Committees and Resource Groups

Develop relationships with fellow professionals—including corporate in-house counsel—and demonstrate proficiency in your practice areas. IPO has dozens of active committees and resource groups working on the most important areas of IP law and practice. Please see the last page for a list.

As an IPO law firm member, your team can work directly with our corporate members to publish reports and develop IPO's policies and positions on key issues. Committee assignments are also a great way to provide your associates with leadership experience. Vice-chair positions are usually reserved for law firm members. Actively participating in IPO committees can also lead to additional opportunities and connections; speakers and presenters for our conferences and webinars are selected from IPO's member.
